JOHN SEIGEL.

BY R. A.

[John Seigel, a looker-on at the prize fight at Clinton, a short time ago, an account of which appeared in these columns, was shot and killed while in the act of returning a hat to a person who had requested him to do so.]

And they buried him, Tom, as he fell;
They took not the shoes from his feet,
Nor washed from his body the smell;
But in his old work clothes complete
They buried him, Tom, as he fell.

'Twas no crime of his, Tom, that he fell,
Our poor, honest, old, innocent friend.
The people here all loved him well,
And mourn at his untimely end;
They regret that he needlessly fell.

'Twas thro' kindness of heart that he fell,
'Twas his last act of life to befriend,
And the bystanders who saw all tell
That a generous act caused his end;
By a dastardly bullet he fell.

And to bury him, Tom, as he fell
Was scarcely the fair thing to do
By one who had soldiered so well.
In battle, dear Tom, it might do,
But in peace it's a hard thing to tell.
But they buried him, Tom, as he fell;
Nor washed him, nor dressed him anew.
It may be, perhaps, just as well,
But it don't seem the fair thing to do,
And for Clinton it sounds bad to tell.

It is sad to behold a proud chieftain so badly waxed.

—A girl at Carrollton, Ark., was betrothed to one man when she desired to marry another. She married the first, but promised the second that at the end of six months she would elope with him. This arrangement has been carried out.

Now that was in accordance with the times. Perhaps if she keeps on she'll serve half the men in the country likewise.

—Consul Baker, of Buenos Ayres, thinks ostrich raising would be a profitable industry in the United States.

It would as long as the supply of old hoopskirts, oyster cans etc., didn't give out wherewith to feed the animals.

—Tom B.—"Is the watermelon a fruit or a vegetable?"

It depends on how you get the melon. If you buy it or somebody gives it to you, it is a mere vegetable; but if you happen to carry it half a mile, with a granger's bull dog nipping at your heels every jump, it becomes rich tropical fruit, worth a thousand vegetables.

Well, it would be rather odd for a laundress that wouldn't wash.

RESIGNATION.

BY ROSA PEARLE.

Ah! if thou could'st come back to me,
Just once, in this long ago,
With sweet shy grace and winsome smile,
And white robes fluttering to and fro.

If I could see thee gliding in,
And feel thy hand with light caress
Brush back from off my heated face
A stray lock, or wanton tress.

I should feel, weeping bitter tears,
And clasping thee with tender fold
Should tell thee, I had suffered much
Since clinging arms had loved their hold.

It seems so long—so long—ah God!
Why not forget remembering this,
These weary days and months, and years,
Have given thee unending bliss.

Remembering time no more is thine,
Nor care'st thou measure grief, or tears,
As human griefs are reckoned up,
God gives eternity—not years.

And what are these dark woes of mine
To thine completed full delight,
What this brief desolation liv'd
To thine inheritance of light?

Forgive—forgive—beloved, best,
Forgive this weak humanity
That sadly means—thou can'st not come,
Wait thou—and I will go to thee.

SEDALIA.

—During the past week but very few entertainments have been given, and the most of our society people have contented themselves with witnessing the incomparable actings of Florence Herbert and her troupe at the opera house. A visit to the theatre is almost if not entirely as pleasant as a ball or social reunion occasionally, and it is now fashionable in all the larger cities to make up parties consisting of perhaps a half-a-dozen ladies, and a like number of gentlemen, whenever a star actor or actress occupies the boards for this purpose. An enjoyable feature of the affair is an elegantly prepared and served luncheon at some fashionable restaurant after the play is over. To be sure there is no inconsiderable expense attending occasions of this kind, but in this feverish day when novelty is the worshiped god, and fashion demands something wherewith to satisfy its insatiable desires, expense must be deemed secondary. People who are entertained must entertain, and while there may be a lack of genuine heart warmth, and only a semblance of real affection in their hospitality, there must be no lack of display, glitter and "smell of sandalwood."

—The country residence, seven miles north of the city, of Capt. Wm. K. Ramey, was a scene of much happiness last Wednesday. The occasion was the celebration of the golden wedding of the Captain and his wife. A large number of friends were present and a feast that would have done credit to royalty was served. An interesting feature of the affair was the marriage of the captain's grand-daughter, Miss Mary Ramey and Mr. Thomas Grinstead, son of Col. J. C. Grinstead, one of the old settlers of Heath's Creek township.

—The entertainment given by the pupils of room No. 11, Broadway school, last Friday evening, was very satisfactory and enjoyable, and a large audience testified to their appreciation. The music was unusually fine as rendered by the orchestra, and many of the scholars who gave recitations, etc., not only did well but displayed much talent. Among those whose efforts deserve especial mention in their efforts were Misses Mary Leaming, May Small, Julia Linings, May Montgomery, Nannie David, Myrtle Sturtevant, Maggie Tewmy, Theresa Gowdy, Annie Jackson, Gertrude Faulhaber and others. The whole affair was well conducted, and both scholars and teachers deserve much credit.

COFFEE.

Mrs. John L. Hall, assisted by Miss Belle, gave a "coffee" Friday afternoon, which was pronounced very enjoyable by those who had the pleasure of being present. The refreshments, which were served in a delightful manner, consisted of French sandwiches, salads, cold tongue, rolls, chocolate, lemon and angel cake, orange ice, vanilla cream, choice fruits, confections, nuts and coffee. There were present: Mesdames John G. Allen, Joel Gentry, J. C. Thompson, Rev. Duncan, Rev. Beattie, Will Hagenitz, Emmet Phillips, Dr. Ed. Evans, Mayhew, of St. Louis, Frank Houston, Will Beiter, Charley Brown, Harry Deunth, Cloney, Offield, Wm. Maltby, Misses Hattie Marvin, Gertrude Gist, Nannie, Bettie and Mary Gentry, Sallie Potter, Ella Porter, Allie Chapplear, Mattie Sneed and Clara Allen.

THEATER PARTY.

Mrs. Ben Lyon, although she departed from the usual form of entertaining her friends Friday evening, did it in a very handsome manner. After serving an elegant "tea" at her residence on Broadway which was partaken of with much enjoyment, carriages were announced and the entire party were conveyed to the opera house, where they witnessed the play of Frou Frou, as presented by the Florence Herbert company. The invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Hoffman, Miss Sallie Potter and Mr. George Stanton, Miss Allie Ritter and Maj. Dowland, Miss Hattie Marvin and Mr. Gus Houston, Miss Lon Zerring, a guest of Mrs. Col. Eddy from Texas, and Mr. Tom Kehoe. Col. and Mrs. Eddy were expected to be of the party, but owing to an accident whereby the Colonel had the misfortune to sprain his ankle severely, they were unable to be present. The theatre party was very much enjoyed and the novelty of its arrangement reflects much credit on its originator.

—[Grandma Kulmer, who has lately returned from an extended trip in Michigan and Indiana, left some very warm and appreciative friends behind her, as the following lines written for and forwarded to her by one of them will testify:]

AN AGED CHRISTIAN.

"With earthly scenes, I'm almost through,
And I am glad and sorry, too;
Glad to be done with toil and strife,
Sorry I've erred so oft in life.
Glad from temptation to be free,
Sorry I yet o'er cometh me;
Glad I shall soon be clear of sin,
Sorry I still doth lurk within.
Glad when I reach the shining shore,
I'll greet the loved ones gone before;
Sorry the view so strangely dear
Should dimly to my sight appear.
Glad for the hope that cheereth me,
That I shall soon my Savior see;
Sorry dark clouds obscure my way,
And cause me from my Lord to stray.
Glad when I see Him face to face,
Behold the fulness of His grace,
Then perfect love and constant joy
Will leave no sorrow to annoy."
